Description:

Windchaser is a pregnant rose grey female, we currently do not have a grey stud male and therefore I have been having a play with colours to see what we can produce. Although a grey cria would be ideal, my breeding decisions are always based on improving the fleece qualities. Windchaser is a beautifully fine female but ideally needs to have density increased in her offspring. With this in mind I have mated her to Bozdown Riptide who is a eeaa champion light fawn male who has excellent fineness and density. I am excited to see what this combination will produce.

Name of covering male: Bozdown Riptide (Light Fawn)
